St Andrews Merchant's Street Map of St. Andrews

FOREWORD

The welcome visitor to the old town of St. Andrews is always able to take his ease at his Inn, be the 'Inn' one of its world famous hotels or a private house.

For antiquarians and historians it has exceptional things to offer: a ruined castle with subterranean passage and dungeon, ancient monasteries, Mary Queen of Scots' House, and a 'dinged doon' Cathedral. It is the seat of Scotland's oldest University, the Alma Mater of many of the most famous figures in British History. Yet as a watering place St. Andrews does provide with a lavish hand all that is required by the most insistent visitor - calm blue seas and vast stretches of golden sand for bathing under a Mediterranean sky, and long sea walks. Along the edge of the broad West Sands runs the coast road, bordered by sand-hills and the world-famous golf links - a terrain to make the heart glad, and one which is renowned the World Over.

The History Sheet will provide more detailed historical information of this Historic City. The memories enshrined in this remarkable town are not all of them sorrowful for throughout the centuries men have written and poets have sung of the inspiration which came to them from the serene beauty of St. Andrews, with its setting of sea and sands and cliffs.

President

"There is no single spot in Scotland equally full of historical interest ... no place in this country over which the genius of antiquity lingers so impressively"

Lord Cockburn 1844
